

Let's Read

What predicts a child's ability to read well?

Let's Read

What predicts a child's ability to read well?

Let's Read

What predicts a child's ability to read well?

Let's Read

What predicts a child's ability to read well?

Answer: Knowing nursery rhymes.

"A child who knows 8 rhymes by heart at 4 years of age will probably be one of the best readers in the class by the time he or she is 8 years old." Mem Fox in Reading Magic

- Rhymes help children notice similarities and differences in sound.
- Rhymes help a child make good guesses about which word will come next. Good guesses help a child gain confidence as a successful "reader."

Star light, star bright,
First star I see tonight,
I'm going to try with all
my might
To keep my jammies dry
all night.

Answer: Knowing nursery rhymes.

"A child who knows 8 rhymes by heart at 4 years of age will probably be one of the best readers in the class by the time he or she is 8 years old." Mem Fox in Reading Magic

- Rhymes help children notice similarities and differences in sound.
- Rhymes help a child make good guesses about which word will come next. Good guesses help a child gain confidence as a successful "reader."

Star light, star bright,
First star I see tonight,
I'm going to try with all
my might
To keep my jammies dry
all night.

Answer: Knowing nursery rhymes.

"A child who knows 8 rhymes by heart at 4 years of age will probably be one of the best readers in the class by the time he or she is 8 years old." Mem Fox in Reading Magic

- Rhymes help children notice similarities and differences in sound.
- Rhymes help a child make good guesses about which word will come next. Good guesses help a child gain confidence as a successful "reader."

Star light, star bright,
First star I see tonight,
I'm going to try with all
my might
To keep my jammies dry
all night.

Answer: Knowing nursery rhymes.

"A child who knows 8 rhymes by heart at 4 years of age will probably be one of the best readers in the class by the time he or she is 8 years old." Mem Fox in Reading Magic

- Rhymes help children notice similarities and differences in sound.
- Rhymes help a child make good guesses about which word will come next. Good guesses help a child gain confidence as a successful "reader."

Star light, star bright,
First star I see tonight,
I'm going to try with all
my might
To keep my jammies dry
all night.

